Enforcement Coming to Mon Boulevard "No Parking" Areas

The WV Department of Transportation is installing the signs this week.

MORGANTOWN – The Morgantown Police Department is set to start enforcing the new "No Parking" signs that are being installed along Monongahela Boulevard.

The West Virginia Division of Highways will be installing simple "No Parking Any Time" signs this week. On the northbound lane side (the Creative Arts Center side), signs will be posted from the PRT Bridge to the intersection of Mon Boulevard and Patteson Drive. On the southbound lane side (Coliseum, Core Aboretum), they will replace the current "No Parking This Side" signs that run adjacent to the Coliseum lot from the intersection of Mon and Patteson to the Aboretum, and continue to run along Mon Boulevard and the PRT fence to 8th Street.

Because this has been such a popular parking area in the past, the Morgantown Police Department are going to give warning tickets until Monday, October 29th, to allow ample time those who regularly park there to become aware of the new rules.

The City and West Virginia University are encouraging drivers to also consider public transportation in their commute to cut costs. Also, The Morgantown Parking Authority manages many parking facilities in city limits. Visit parkmpa.com to see what is available.

A meeting between City and WVU Officials will be held Friday to discuss parking alternatives.

Please contact City Manager Terrence Moore at (304) 284-7405 for more information related to this release.

These "No Parking This Side" signs are affiliated with the WVU Coliseum and are not new. They run from the Coliseum entrance at the intersection of Patteson Drive and Mon Boulevard. They will be replaced this week with the new "No Parking Any Time" signs.

These No Parking Any Time signs have been installed this week, and will run along both sides of Mon Boulevard from the PRT Bridge to the CAC entrance and Aboretum, and on the southbound side to 8th Street.
